

I would like to state my support for any initiative which allows more local controlled media outlets. The trend has been away from anything local in the way of radio broadcasts, everyday we hear about radio stations being bought up by conglomerates who in many cases are not just American corporations but international corporations. Who is to say what their agendas really are? They certainly don't have the local community's interests at heart and have the end result of driving out any local culture or beliefs that reduce their advertising profits. The corporation's methods of increasing their bottom lines is not generally in the interest of local communities.
